ETHRC MISSION & METHODOLOGY

The East Timor Human Rights Centre (ETHRC) is an independent, non-political, international human rights centre established in 1995 in Melbourne, Australia, to meet the urgent need for the protection and promotion of the human rights of the East Timorese people.

The ETHRC aims to:

- Protect and promote the human rights of the people of East Timor;
- Develop a human rights culture, including democratic processes and participation, amongst East Timorese people, both inside and outside East Timor; and
- Empower East Timorese people to promote and protect their human rights and incorporate human rights principles into their relationships and institutions at all levels.

Human rights are defined broadly to include the promotion and protection of civil, political, social, economic and cultural rights, as provided for in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international covenants widely accepted.

The ETHRC fulfils its purposes through:

- collecting, collating and disseminating information about human rights abuses against East Timorese civilians in East Timorese;
- training and educating East Timorese people, both inside and outside East Timor; and
- conducting other activities including research, publishing reports and submissions to governments and the United Nations.

Documentation forms the main core of work at the ETHRC because of the serious human rights violations which continue to occur in East Timor. The ETHRC documents all cases of human rights violations committed against East Timorese civilians, irrespective of whether the perpetrators are members of the Indonesian security forces and its agents or members of Falintil (East Timorese National Liberation Army).

Through its solid and reliable network on the ground in East Timor, the ETHRC receives cases of human rights abuses almost on a daily basis. The information is cross-checked and corroborated with other sources before being produced into several types of reports: Urgent Action, United Nations Reports, Bi-Annual and Annual reports of human rights violations and general reports on particular violations.

ETHRC reports are given full international distribution, including to UN agencies, international NGOs, solidarity groups and individual activists, key media contacts, Foreign Ministries and the general public through the World Wide Web.

Through its documentation and lobbying activities, the ETHRC raises international awareness of the human rights violations committed against East Timorese civilians.

Ultimately international awareness is one of the most effective safeguards of human rights.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The first half of 1999 has seen an alarming escalation of human rights violations in East Timor. Two major changes in the political climate in East Timor have been met with increased human rights violations against East Timorese civilians. The first major political event was President Habibie's January 27 commitment to allow the East Timorese people to vote on an autonomy package. The second event was the signing of the UN Accords on May 5 for the UN to conduct a popular consultation to determine the will of the East Timorese people. Despite the raised hopes of a peaceful solution to the East Timor conflict, there is a serious security crisis on the eve of the referendum.

During this period most of the human rights violations have been at the hands of pro-Indonesian militia groups which are supported by the Indonesian army. ETHRC sources have confirmed that the militias are not acting on their own volition and that the militia groups are being recruited and trained by the Indonesian army. This worrying trend of the recruitment of militias for the purposes of perpetrating violence and intimidation against civilians has been well documented by the ETHRC.

One of the most alarming atrocities documented by the ETHRC during the first six months of 1999 was the early April Liquica massacre where at least 46 civilians were extra-judicially executed and 56 people were seriously injured. This was the first time that killings on such a massive scale had taken place within a parish. On 5 May, after signing the UN Accords, Kofi Annan, UN Secretary General, warned Indonesia of its obligations to protect the people of East Timor and to effectively carry out its responsibility for law and order and the protection of all civilians.

Thus far, Indonesia has failed in its obligations to protect civilians. It has also failed to protect humanitarian relief workers and UN personnel from attacks by the militias backed by the Indonesian army. The lack of security in East Timor, at present, is seriously threatening the right of East Timorese to self determination. The ETHRC condemned the appointment of Eurico Guterres to command PAM Swakarsa (the security force overseeing the UN ballot). This move clearly implicates the Indonesian government in the on-going attempts to sabotage the referendum as Eurico Guterres is the commander of the Aitarak militia responsible for grave human rights abuses in East Timor.

The ETHRC is also concerned with the alarming trend of the increase in the number of Internally Displaced Persons (IDP's) living in life-threatening conditions. Militia violence and intimidation directed at civilian villagers has left tens of thousands of people homeless after their properties and livelihoods were destroyed. This pervasive climate of intimidation and human rights violations diminishes the opportunity for civilians in East Timor to exercise their right to register and vote which was guaranteed by Indonesia under the UN Accords.

While the work of the United Nations Assistance Mission to East Timor (UNAMET) has been positive in maintaining a semblance of peace in some places of East Timor, other diplomatic pronouncements by foreign governments have done little to make Indonesia comply with its international obligations. The Indonesian army and other perpetrators of human rights violations in East Timor are still acting with impunity. Indonesia has defied the UN and the international community.

A. INTRODUCTION

1. Security Crisis in East Timor

Human rights violations in East Timor have vastly increased in frequency and severity in the first half of 1999. Despite recent hope gained by the East Timor Human Rights Centre (ETHRC) in light of two major political events in 1999, the current security crisis in East Timor is clearly troubling. On 27 January 1999, President Habibie announced that the people of East Timor would be free to leave Indonesia if they rejected proposals for autonomy. Also, agreement was reached on 5 May for the United Nations (UN) to conduct a popular consultation to determine the decision of East Timorese on the Indonesian proposal of autonomy.¹

These two events created a platform for peaceful debate and campaigning, by people and groups, in support of autonomy or independence. However, hopes for peace were diminished by the increase in armed and violent militia groups violating the human rights of the East Timorese soon after President Habibie's announcement. The purpose of the organised violence of the Indonesian military and the militias it supports has been to set East Timorese people against one another and undermine a free and fair consultation, which Indonesia promised under the UN Accords.

Violations have been increasingly carried out by militia bands purporting to be spontaneous and outside the control of the Army. At first, it was thought that militias might only be assisted by dissident local members of the armed forces but numerous reports confirmed they are organised, armed, trained and directed with the support of high ranking members of the Indonesia Army. The Indonesian Army's and government's financial interests in East Timor, and their unwillingness to admit their illegal occupation of East Timor has led to the high level support of the militias. The conflict is not between East Timorese but between the Indonesian Army and the East Timorese people whom it seeks to deny the opportunity to decide their future.

Persistent UN attempts to initiate a settlement of the East Timor dispute have succeeded with the New York Accords that require Indonesia to provide the requisite security for a "free and fair" ballot "devoid of violence or other forms of intimidation"² in hundreds of villages under Indonesian military occupation. The ETHRC welcomed the UN Accords as a step towards peace, but the heightened human rights violations in East Timor were of central concern to security. Recent militia attacks and Indonesian failure to keep the requisite security is in defiance of the recent UN Accords, the international community, and President Habibie's commitment.

The New York accords specified that a "neutral" security force would be the responsibility of the government of Indonesia. In response, several thousand police were sent to the territory. At the same time, most of the 17,000 army personnel also remained in the territory. However, violence continued in East Timor.

On 6 April, at least 46 civilians were killed and 56 wounded in the attack on a Liquica parish and Dato village by the Indonesian army and the militias they support. To date, no one has been prosecuted, showing the impunity commonly enjoyed by the military and militias. But, after the Liquica massacre, UN Secretary-General, Kofi Annan, warned Indonesia about its obligations to protect the people of East Timor in the lead-up to the vote on autonomy, and to effectively carry out its

² Article 1, East Timor Popular Consultation Agreement Regarding Security, 5 May 1999.

“responsibility for law and order and the protection of all civilians.”³

Indonesia has failed to carry out its responsibility. The lack of security has greatly restricted the work of journalists, local and international human rights organisations, UN staff, and medical and relief organisations. Large numbers of East Timorese now lack basic human rights such as food, medical attention, personal security and freedom.

On 6 July the Security Council attacked as ‘inexcusable’ the failure of Indonesian authorities to protect humanitarian relief and UN personnel from worsening anti-independence militia violence in East Timor. The President, Mr. Hasmy Agam, said the Council “demanded an immediate halt to the practice of violence and intimidation carried out by the militias.”⁴ Most Indonesian doctors have left East Timor and few foreign doctors have been allowed to enter. There is a shortage of medical supplies and those sent have been delayed at the wharf and airport. Many Indonesian teachers have left the territory, and this shortage adversely affects the schools.⁵ Now, most journalists are confined to small areas within Dili due to the widespread attacks on civilians.

The lack of security is threatening the right of the East Timorese to self determination guaranteed under international law and the recent New York Accords. The continued intimidation and violence has led to several registration centres closing and the inability of the East Timorese to decide their future.

There are serious concerns of continuing violations of human rights committed by the Indonesian backed militias, the military and police. Although the militias are now the chief perpetrators they still enjoy the endorsement from the Indonesian authorities. This lack of security in the region and the free reign of the militias threaten the East Timorese in the lead up to the referendum planned for August.

2. Alarming Increase in Human Rights Violations for 1999

The first half of 1999 has seen a dramatic increase in the number of human rights violations in East Timor. For example, in the first half of 1999, the ETHRC documented 215 extrajudicial executions compared to 51 executions for the total of 1998. The use of militias for the systematic persecution of human rights defenders has also marked this period. As a result of the terror instigated by the militias backed by the Indonesia military, a new problem of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) has arisen. Despite the number of independent UN and humanitarian personnel in East Timor, little is known of violations outside the areas to which the media and independent agencies are restricted.

Indonesia has obligated itself to uphold basic human rights, however it continually fails. Indonesian obligations stem from three humanitarian legal sources, namely: 1) the Indonesian Criminal Code and Criminal Procedure Code; 2) human rights guaranteed under two treaty bodies that Indonesia has ratified, including the 1949 Geneva War Crimes Conventions and the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment; and, 3) the signing of the United Nations Charter and UN membership which obligates Indonesia to uphold the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), and the International Bill of Rights which flow from the UDHR. A brief overview of the violations shows the gravity of the human rights situation in the first half of 1999.

The most alarming violation, after President Habibie's commitment in January, was the massacre carried out by the 'Red and White Iron' militia in the Liquica parish on 6 April. It took place in front of many witnesses while the Indonesian National Army (TNI) participated and other army officials and the police refused to intervene.

The ETHRC has reported at least 46 deaths in the Liquica massacre and has identified several military members as the perpetrators.⁶ These figures are similar to Bishop Belo's, who believes that at least 35 people were killed. Indonesian authorities said an inquiry would be held but no action has taken place to date, in this or other atrocities.⁷

The ETHRC has documented rising patterns of extrajudicial executions, arbitrary detentions, torture and ill treatment, and disappearances. Amnesty International confirmed a distinct pattern of human rights violations, the victims of which are overwhelmingly supporters of independence for East Timor. According to Amnesty, the current level of violence by militias in East Timor was part of a well organised campaign to prevent Timorese from voting for independence.⁸

An Australian Council for Overseas Aid (ACFOA) delegation that visited East Timor from 5 to 12 June reported on "a pervasive climate of intimidation and human rights violations."⁹ The delegation said that evidence indicated that a concerted effort was being orchestrated by government officials and the military to ensure a vote for autonomy which was in direct breach of the 5 May agreement.

The systematic persecution of human rights defenders is a clear pattern in East Timor. Soon after the Liquica parish massacre, for example, the home of Manuel Carrascalao in Dili was invaded by armed militia. Manuel Carrascalao is a leading figure in GRPRTT, Movement for Reconciliation and Unity of the People of East Timor, and the CNRT. His son, Manuel (Manuelito) Carrascalao, a member of Humanity Volunteers Team, Tim Relawan Kemanusiaan, was brutally killed by the militia in the attack, along with several others taking refuge.¹⁰

More recently, the Besi Merah Putih militia attacked a convoy of humanitarian workers returning to Dili on 4 July after having delivered food and medicine to a refugee camp. Those in the convoy included members of UNAMET, UNHCR, Caritas, ETADEP and Timor Aid. The convoy had set out from Dili with 25 tons of rice and medicine for 4,000 refugees in Sare, a village in Ermera district. One humanitarian worker was shot, several others injured, and the UNAMET vehicle badly damaged.¹¹ This terror campaign was just one of three conducted against the UN and East Timorese humanitarian workers. On June 30, in Maliana, a group of militia attacked the UN causing several injuries to UN personnel and East Timorese civilians, and fifteen armed militia threatened UN staff in their residences in Viqueque on 31 June.

Due to the terror imposed and violations perpetrated by the militias and the Indonesian military, there are rising numbers of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs). Fifty to eighty thousand internally displaced refugees are of special concern to the ETHRC because it threatens the integrity of the ballot, and deprives the IDPs of their lives and livelihoods by placing them in unlivable conditions.¹² They must take refuge in make-shift camps and parishes. Most of the IDPs are beyond the reach of humanitarian assistance and are being held as hostages because they reject integration.

Caritas East Timor successfully accessed a camp in Maubara district during the visit of the ACFOA delegation. They found 500 families (about 3,000 people) whose fields had been destroyed and houses burned. The families had been forced to live in camps run by Besi Merah Putih militia, which lacked adequate food, sanitation and basic amenities. The children were malnourished, with lice, scabies, runny noses and coughs.

It is clear that Indonesian backed militia groups are responsible for the IDP problem because of their widespread terror and intimidation campaigns throughout East Timor. They also prevent aid workers from reaching the IDPs, and force them to move before aid workers can reach them.¹³

Due to the increased violence and intimidation, large numbers of people have been prevented from earning their living on farms and in other jobs. In many areas, especially in the west, militia violence and intimidation is preventing people from harvesting this year's coffee crop or tending other crops.¹⁴

Indonesia has obligated itself to uphold fundamental human rights. However, Indonesia has failed to live up to these obligations and its obligations to secure an environment free of intimidation and violence as required under the UN Accords. The massive increase in human rights violations and the systematic persecution of human rights defenders and independence supporters raises legitimate concerns that Indonesia will not abide by its own law in East Timor. The central reason for Indonesia being unable to create peace and security is that the Indonesian government and military are actually supporting the violence and intimidation of the East Timorese.

3. UNCOVERING VIOLATORS

The Indonesian government and army have repeatedly escape responsibility for human rights violations. These violations are against East Timorese civilians and are supported and performed by the Indonesian military and the militias they back. The international community must become aware of these activities and hold the government responsible. The ETHRC has found the following trends which clearly identifies the Indonesian role in the injustice: the escalation of Indonesian military backed militias, the continued violations by the Indonesia army and police forces, the forced recruitment of East Timorese into militias, and the appointment of militia members to PAM Swakarsa (the security force overlooking the UN administered ballot). In response to uncovering the massive human rights violations and those responsible, the international community and the East Timorese have been working to end the struggle even though impunity continues for the violators of human rights.

In 1999, the Indonesian authorities did make a few attempts to prosecute violators of human rights in East Timor. For example, in the killing of Manulito Carrascalao six individuals were arrested, however, Eurico Guterres, the leader of the Aitarak militia and the person who was alleged to be directly involved in the killing, has enjoyed impunity. High levels of the military and the militias continue to escape criminal charges even when they are known to be the organisers of systematic violence.

The media has rigorously investigated the violations and sought to find the perpetrators. As a result, the international community has condemned the human rights violations in East Timor. It was reported that Australian intelligence assessments detailed the Indonesian military complicity in East Timorese killings in the weeks before the recent massacres at Liquica and Dili.¹⁵ Moreover, Australian and US intelligence have been reported to clearly show that high ranking members of the Indonesian Army and government are involved, or complicit in, the violence against East Timorese.¹⁶

The increasing use of militias to violate human rights of the East Timorese reached alarming levels in 1999. Militias are commonly supported by the Indonesian army which provides high level political complicity, transport, accommodation and logistics.¹⁷ Most of the militia members have been forced to join the groups. Civilians have been threatened with death if they do not join the local militia, while others have been given financial inducements.¹⁸ ETHRC sources also confirm that many militia members have been recruited from West Timor and other parts of Indonesia.

The appointment of Guterres as head of the new civilian defence force, PAM Swakarsa, and the enlistment of other militia members, clearly violates the East Timor Popular Consultation Agreement Regarding Security which requires "absolute neutrality" of the Indonesian Army and police. The ETHRC condemned the Indonesian government for recruiting Eurico Guterres and other members from the Indonesian military-backed pro-integration militias into PAM Swakarsa to ensure security for the August ballot.¹⁹ Eurico Guterres has directed militia members to kill supporters of independence. The High Commissioner for Human Rights, Mary Robinson, also deplored the appointment of the militia leaders, especially Eurico Guterres, because of the speeches he made in which he termed supporters of independence as 'anti-national' and 'traitors'.²⁰

An example of the involvement of the military with the militias can clearly be seen in the recent attacks on the UN in Maliana. The UN Report on the 29 June attack names four senior

Indonesian Sergeants, and the army chief of intelligence, Lieutenant Satrisno, who control the militias around Maliana. Lieutenant Satrisno denied involvement when accused but replied by saying, "If I was involved everyone would have been killed."²¹

4. Lack of Response to the Crisis

The response to the dramatic increase in human rights violations has largely been that of diplomacy and limited action. The United Nations and foreign governments have all condemned Indonesia but have not imposed forceful sanctions.

The United Nations Assistance Mission to East Timor (UNAMET) has acted impartially in organising the consultation. It has protested against militia violations and the intimidation of its own staff and of East Timorese people. The Security Council has also insisted that Jakarta honour its undertaking. Although Indonesia is failing to establish conditions for a free election, the Security Council has not proposed to send a peacekeeping force to ensure its mandate is carried out.

Foreign governments have made strong diplomatic representation to Jakarta. The Australian Foreign Affairs Minister, Alexander Downer, and other diplomatic missions have strongly protested. The US State Department has recently stated that "pro-Jakarta militias which have operated with the acquiescence and support of elements of the Indonesian military are responsible for much of the recent violence and killings in East Timor."²²

Diplomatic protests have not been backed by concrete actions. The Australian army still maintains close military relations with the Indonesian army, and there has been no suggestion that the military assistance from the many countries that Indonesia relies on, should be conditional on ending human rights violations.

Mr. Downer and the Australian opposition spokesperson for Foreign Affairs, Laurie Brereton have condemned the violence and called on the government of Indonesia to honour its commitment.²³ Mr. Downer said the UN and the international community would not "be bullied by a bunch of hoodlums and thugs from militias throwing rocks and using home made weapons."²⁴

East Timorese leaders have recognised the importance of keeping security in East Timor. Xanana Gusmao, CNRT President who is currently serving a 20 year sentence under house arrest, recognised that the security situation in East Timor is really at the behest of Indonesia. He stated that the referendum outcome "will depend on the Indonesian government's compliance with the terms of the agreement relating to its responsibility for creating a climate of peace and tranquillity for the population."²⁵

A response to the heightened campaign of intimidation also came from the Catholic Church in East Timor led by Bishop Carlos Belo and Bishop Basilio Nascimento. On 27 April, Bishop Belo inaugurated the Commission of Peace and Stability in an attempt to end the violence. More than sixteen representatives from pro-Indonesian and independence groups, the local administration, police and military joined officials from the National Commission on Human Rights and the Catholic Church.

Also, at the second Dare Conference in Jakarta, the participants, including Nobel Peace Co-Laureate Jose Ramos-Horta, agreed in-principle to the June 18 agreement on the disarmament of militias and Falintil, and to respect the outcome of the UN administered popular consultation in August.

Despite all the diplomatic attempts to end the human rights abuses in East Timor, heightened human rights violations, with continued impunity, is the clear trend. Perpetrators include the Indonesian police and military, and the militia which they have supported and organised. Although diplomatic attempts are made to remedy the continuing abuse, the Indonesian government must live up to its obligations and end the complicity and the continued impunity enjoyed by the military and the militias.

5. Crimes & Impunity

The Indonesian military leaders, high government officials and militia leaders have enjoyed continued impunity for directing and supporting grave human rights abuses for nearly a quarter of a century, including the six months covered in this report. However, Indonesia is bound by international law, the recent UN Accords, and its national legislation to halt human rights abuses and support law and order in East Timor.

Under the New York Accords Indonesia is required to provide "a secure environment devoid of violence or other forms of intimidation" for a free and fair ballot. However, the Accord has clearly been breached evidenced by violations detailed in this report and also by the appointment of militia members as the authority to ensure security for the ballot in the region.

The Indonesian bias and intimidation can also be seen at high levels of the government. The Chief of the Education and Culture Department of the Bobonaro District Branch Office signed and sent civil servants in Maliana a form requiring them to indicate and sign their choice for autonomy or integration. Also, the Governor of East Timor, has signed documents on 21 May and 7 June, which approved the expenditure of 3 billion rupiahs by the head of each region for the support of autonomy campaigns, and Socialise promotion (pro-autonomy propaganda).

The continued trend of impunity must end. The Security Council and its powerful members have done little beyond making diplomatic protests to Indonesia for its failure to implement the Accord and protect basic human rights. The Security Council is empowered to create a war crimes tribunal, such as those in Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia. The possibility of creating a tribunal must be explored if the Indonesian government continues to turn its head to the numerous violations in East Timor.

Clear violations of human rights and pro-autonomy government bias in the lead up to the referendum are of great concern for the future of security in East Timor. Because Indonesia is unwilling to investigate, prosecute or deter violators of human rights and the UN Accords, the international community must continue to pressure all levels of the Indonesian government, the UN, and members of the Security Council to put an end to the twenty-four year conflict.

B. RECOMMENDATIONS

The escalating violence in the lead up to the August referendum is impeding the chances of the East Timorese people to exercise their right to self-determination. The ETHRC believes a peaceful solution to the conflict in East Timor can not be achieved without respect for human rights. The ETHRC, therefore makes the following recommendations to the Indonesian government, the East Timorese resistance and the international community aimed at ending the trend of escalating violations in East Timor.

1. Recommendations to the Government of Indonesia

The ETHRC urges the government of Indonesia to take the following steps in order to demonstrate its commitment to reducing violations and bringing about peace in East Timor:

1. Disband and disarm all militia groups operating in East Timor. Ensure this is accomplished under UN supervision.
2. Immediately cease all offensive military operations in East Timor and withdraw all troops so as to put an end to the human rights violations which have continued to be perpetrated by the Indonesian military and by military backed militias.
3. Immediately and unconditionally release Xanana Gusmao from "house arrest" and immediately and unconditionally release all East Timorese prisoners of conscience, detained or convicted solely for the non-violent expression of their views, and any other East Timorese prisoners, detained or convicted for political reasons.
4. Ensure compliance with its obligations under the UN Accord so that the UN-supervised August referendum is conducted in an environment of peace and security, allowing the East Timorese people to exercise their right to self-determination.
5. Ensure that the large numbers of Internally Displaced Persons (IDP's) are afforded every opportunity to vote in the upcoming August referendum.
6. Cooperate fully with UNAMET and ensure freedom of movement and security for UN police and staff.

9. Promote and support efforts to strengthen East Timorese civil society, build effective institutions and promote democracy and good governance.

C. HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS

Between January and June 1999, East Timorese civilians have been the subjects of increased human rights violations by the government of Indonesia. The Indonesian military, and militias backed by the Indonesian military, are responsible for the overwhelming majority of human rights violations reported in this period. Under broadly worded Indonesian law, military commanders are given the discretion to establish militias.²⁶ Due to these facts, the ETHRC considers acts committed by Indonesian sponsored militias a direct act of the Indonesian government against East Timorese civilians.

This report only covers violations that occurred from January to June 1999. However, it is not a comprehensive report of all the violations in this period, because the security situation in East Timor prevents human rights NGOs and other concerned East Timorese from investigating the violations. Therefore, only a fraction of violations are reported. The reported violations for the period are categorised into the following categories: extrajudicial executions, attempted extrajudicial executions, arbitrary detention, enforced disappearances, torture, rape and sexual abuse, intimidation and persecution, and violations of right to due process.

The violations embodied in this report are based on obligations stemming from the following three distinct humanitarian obligations that Indonesia has agreed to: 1) Domestic Indonesian law, 2) treaties signed and ratified, and 3) fundamental legal obligations that Indonesia has as a UN member. The Indonesian government is bound under Indonesian law to prevent violations of human rights and punish violators according to Kitab Undang Undang Hukum Pidana (KUHP), and Kitab Undang Undang Hukum Acara Pidana (KUHAP). Indonesia, as a state member of the United Nations, has also signed, ratified, and is bound to enforce the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. Additionally, as a state member of the United Nations, Indonesia is obligated to uphold the principles embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) and the main covenants flowing from the UDHR, including the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. In the period covered Indonesia has failed to uphold its humanitarian legal obligations on all three fronts.

1. Violations of Right to Life

Compared to 1998 the number of executions and attempted executions has dramatically increased.²⁷ The ETHRC has received reports of 364 violations of the right to life and security of person against the East Timorese. A continuing theme of impunity follows the executions and attempted executions. The majority of the violations are perpetrated by the Indonesian government and militias backed by the Indonesian military. The Indonesian government does not investigate, arrest or punish the perpetrators of the violations. The ETHRC is very concerned with the justice system in Indonesia as exemplified by the unwillingness of Indonesia to investigate one case of mass executions in Liquica which resulted in at least 46 deaths, and 56 serious injuries. Given this impunity, the ETHRC urges the United Nations to carry out a full investigation, including the establishment of an East Timor War Crimes Tribunal.

Extrajudicial executions are a violation of the right to life as set forth in Article 3 of the United Nation's Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which the UN General Assembly adopted in 1948. It was further set forth by the General Assembly in 1966 when it ratified the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which succinctly states in Article 6: "Every human being has the inherent right to life. This right shall be protected by law. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life." Extrajudicial executions and attempted extrajudicial executions are also in violation of articles 53 and 338 of the Indonesian Penal Code (KUHP). There were 215 reported incidents of extrajudicial execution, and 149 reports of attempted extrajudicial execution.

1.1 Extrajudicial Executions

Case 1.1.1

On 3 January 1999, at about 10:00 am, Mahidin, Mati Hidup Dengan Integrasi, "Death or Life with Integration" militia were implicated in the shooting of several individuals in Manutasi village, Ainaro district.

Initially, Mahidin shot at several East Timorese youths, Asiri Dutel Ferreira, Joao Martins and Jaime (no surname), in Manutasi village after the youths travelled to a Mahidin post in Manutasi village on motor bike in attempts to reconcile past differences during the new year with Mahidin who are repeatedly alleged to impose violence on the people of Ainaro. When the youths were attacked in Manutasi village they fled and went back to Ainaro. Meanwhile, a large group of youths went to the Mahidin post to plead for reconciliation, shortly thereafter Mahidin members attacked the groups of youths killing the following individuals: Renaldo Orleans, 23, from Soro village (shot in chest and foot), Julio (no surname), 24, from Maulo village. Renaldo Orleans, after being shot, was subject to mutilation. He was also stabbed repeatedly, his left foot and left ear were cut off and part of his foot was thrown away. Many others were also seriously injured in the incident (see case 3.1.18, Appendix A). There are also unconfirmed reports that Julieta da Costa died from a gunshot injury after giving birth to her child, and Maurico (no surname) died from similar attacks on January 3 by Mahidin.

In January, three youths were killed while in the custody of BTT 143 Post and Grasio (no surname), a Mahidin member. The following youths were executed: Jose Sarmiento, 25, a married farmer from Guguleur village, Vatu Mori hamlet, Manuel Sarmiento, 20, farmer from Guguleur village, Agapito (no surname), 25, married farmer from Guguleur village. The three victims and two others were arrested by Grasiano and others in Loes. The two unidentified others escaped while the three deceased were brought to BTT 143 Post. The bodies were subsequently found in the Loes River, and buried by family.

Case 1.1.3

On 24 January, in Zumalai sub-district, Mape village, Webaba hamlet, Fernando Cardoso, 27, male, farmer from Hudai hamlet, Carabau village, Bobonaro subdistrict, Bobonaro district, is believed to have been shot in the head and killed by members of Mahidin, RATI (a para-military group believed to have been trained and armed by the Indonesian military) and Indonesian military personnel from the marine post at Cassa in Ainaro or Mahidin members.²⁸ Sources have alleged that Fernando's body was severely mutilated and his limbs removed and that he was buried beside the road with his head still exposed. He was shot while travelling with two friends on mopeds. While travelling a group of people in full combat gear driving a Kijang pick-up overtook the moped and shot at the youths. Fernando Cardoso died instantly and the group threw him on the side of the road and covered him with stones. Subsequently his friends were arrested and are still missing, and the incident investigation team was arrested, and one of them is still missing (see case 2.1.7 on arbitrary detention)

Case 1.1.4 - Angelica de Jesus, 27, housewife from Nagidan village

Case 1.1.4 - Olandino de Jesus, 55, farmer, from Galitas found dead with his head badly mutilated

Case 1.1.4

At 10.00 p.m. on 25 January 1999, members of KORAMIL Cassa, the Marines, and Mahidin members launched an assault on the village of Galitas, Zumalai sub-district, shooting at the local population. It is confirmed that Olandino de Jesus, 55, from Nagidan village; Angelica de Jesus, 27, housewife, from Nagidan village; and Luis Pereira, 15, student at SLTP Zumulai, were shot dead during the assault.²⁹ Angelica de Jesus was pregnant at the time she was killed, and according to unconfirmed reports her stomach was cut open and foetus removed after her death. All the victims were shot then mutilated. Many others were injured (see case 1.2.1), and had to flee their homes, holding grave fears for their personal safety. At least two hundred people have fled from the village of Galitas and have sought refuge in churches in Suai District as a result of the assault.

Case 1.1.5

Lucino Ribeiro, 29, from Comoro village, West Dili, was killed on or around 25 January 1999. His body was found in an old transmigration area in Loes after he had gone missing for three days prior. According to ETHRC sources, his body was found missing his intestines, his tongue cut out and the bottom of his legs cut off and missing from the body. When the family attempted to take the body from its location in the transmigration area, members of the Naga Merah and Halilintar prevented them from moving the body.

Case 1.1.6

Valenti (no surname), 35, farmer from Maubaralisa village, Liquica was killed by Mahidin. Sources indicate that the leader of Mahidin, Jose Dasi, was the perpetrator of the killing. Valenti was detained near the Babonu stream between Maubaralisa and Vaviquinia villages. He was thereafter killed with a rice pestle.

Case 1.1.7

Benedito de Jesus Pires, 25, vegetable vendor from Bairro Pite, Dili, was killed by a gunshot on 14 February 1999 at roughly 4:15 p.m. by a bullet identified as a NK-1978 found in his head. He was apparently shot in the head by a Mobile Police Brigade official (BRIMOB) with a sniper rifle. Two BRIMOB officials were located behind a fence, next to the salon near BRIMOB dormitory A, West Dili when they fired shots in the direction of the crowd and Benedito de Jesus Pires.

In the events leading up to the death, the Mahidin militia group led by Cancio de Carvalho began to terrorise the Bairro-Pite area of Dili by shooting randomly while riding around in a red Toyota Kijang. People in the neighbourhood became angry and chased them into the BRIMOB dormitory, where the Mahidin members sought refuge. BRIMOB officials blocked the entrance to the dormitory, and shortly thereafter, the gunshots were fired from the dormitory, one of which killed Benedito de Jesus Pires immediately.

Estimates of 20,000 to 50,000 people were reported as attending the rally accompanying Pires's burial at Santa Cruz in Dili, and no incidents of violence were reported. Protesters marched through the streets leading to the Santa Cruz cemetery singing hymns and chanting East Timorese independence slogans.

Case 1.1. 7 - Mourners with Bendito de Jesus Pires after his death

Case 1.1.8

On 24 February 1999 at about 4:00 p.m. local time at least seven soldiers began firing into a crowd and up in the air in the Becora district of Dili. Reports indicate that the perpetrators were from Battalion 744, and KOREM 164 Wiradarma, and Mahidin, Domingos Berek, and other Intel officers may have been responsible for the shootings. The incident occurred during a funeral near a local Becora army barracks. After the soldiers shot out local residences came out of their homes upset. The following civilians died as a result of the gunshot wounds: Francisco da Conceicao Hornai, 20, Class II SMU 4 Dili, from Bedois, died at the scene from three chest gunshot wounds, and Joaquim de Jesus, 21, East Timor University student, from Bairro Central village, East Dili sub-district, shot in the head, died at the Motael Clinic. Several other unidentified civilians were alleged to have also been injured in the confrontation. There are unconfirmed reports that two Portuguese journalists, Jose Maria and Jose Alberto of the news station SIC, were beaten during the incident, detained and subsequently released. This incident was carried out even though Tamrat Samuel, a member of the UN Secretary-General's staff, was visiting Dili from New York at that time.

Case 1.1.9

On 6 March 1999, eight civilians ran away from Lisa Dila Refugee Camp, which was rigorously controlled by the BMP militia. Of these eight men, one was later shot dead while the other seven escaped. The victim was found under brush on 9 March 1999 with his feet separated from his corpse. His name is Domingos Carrion, 25, from Lisa Dila village, married to Emilia Soares with one child.

Case 1.1.10

Joao Teixeira, 22 years old, from Fatuhada village, Dili was killed on 16 March 1999 by military intelligence members. He was out with friends to play a "Bola Guling," a local ball game in Taibesi. After finishing the game at 1:00 am they went to Farol beach, and suddenly four people came up to them on the beach. Joao's friend Luis Ricardo Pereira escaped when the four Intel members began harassing the youths and pointing their handguns at them. One of the perpetrators was Cristovao (no surname), KOREM intelligence member from Dili. The dead body was found several days later.

Case 1.1.11

On 19 March, at 6:30 p.m., about 20 armed masked men, some dressed in Indonesian military uniforms, arrived in a Kijang in the Maliubu hamlet, Ritabou village, Maliana District and began to open fire on civilians at Olivio Barros's home, then began to open fire on the home of Alberto Araujo nearby. The attack lasted about 30 minutes in which several individuals were killed, 17 houses were looted and 2 houses were severely damaged. 1 million rupiah was stolen from Olivio Barros's home. ETHRC sources indicate that the Maliana based Halilintar, led by Joao Tavares, and the Indonesian military were responsible. The following civilians were killed: Fonseca (Assamali) Gomes, 12, Pedro dos Santos, 27, farmer from Maliubu, Domingos (Monoloi) dos Santos, 18, Joao Ruben Barros, 11. Case 1.1.13

On 4 April at 7.00am civilians were attacked by the militia group, Besi Merah Putih supported by the military, in the Hamlet of Fatubelete, the village of Vatuvou, sub-district of Maurara and Mauboke border between Maubara and Liquica. In the attack Francisco Xavier, 25, from Vatuvou village, Maubara sub-district sustained abdominal and intestinal damage from stabbing wounds from a long sword and subsequently died (see depiction above). Several other civilians were mutilated in the attack, see case 3.1.12.

On 5 and 6 April 1999 one of the worst human rights violations of 1999 occurred in Dato village and the Liquica Parish in particular.

Up to 46 civilians died and 56 were seriously injured in the attacks. The Liquica Appendix B lists all the victims, however, all the perpetrators of the violent crimes are listed in the text of this case.

The ETHRC has documented 29 confirmed and 7 unconfirmed extrajudicial executions in Liquica Church. The only body to have been claimed by family members has been that of Gil Tiago. Victor's brother, in a brave act, retrieved the body from the military truck that was used to take away the remaining deceased who have not been recovered. The ETHRC has documented 32 confirmed and 9 unconfirmed attempted extrajudicial executions in Liquica Church. Also in Dato village, outside the church the ETHRC documented 10 individuals killed in events on 5 April and 6 April 1999 leading up to the Liquica Church Massacre. In the Dato village events there were also 15 injuries from attempted extrajudicial executions. There were also at least 25 houses that were destroyed in Dato village during the attacks (see Property Destruction Appendix C, case 3.3.29). There were also 5 disappearances as a result of the attacks.

ETHRC sources have confirmed that on the day of the Liquica massacre members of KORAMIL (Sub-District Military Command), under the leadership of Dandim 1638 Liquica (Asep Kuswanto), lined both the left and right sides of the street leading into Liquica. It is claimed that KODIM and POLRES members shot at people in the streets. Fearing for their lives, they ran away seeking refuge in the church. The shooting off of guns lasted for an hour during which time the paramilitary group (Besi Merah Putih) entered the city, shouting as they came. The Police Mobile Brigade (BRIMOB) members of Unit B surrounded the church with the Besi Merah Putih and Indonesia Army members and proceeded to kill the civilians inside and outside.

ETHRC witnesses have identified the following perpetrators of the massacre: Abilio Martins, Pangkat Kopral Satu, KORAMIL Maubaru; Domingos Askopas, Pangkat Prajurit Dua, KORAMIL Maubaru; Tobias dos Santos, from Maumeta village, Liquica

The families have not received the bodies. The victims were transported in a vehicle owned by the District Military Commander Siagian, in the direction of the Marobo River, 10 kilometres east of Cailaco. After the execution, Lt. Case 1.1.20

On 17 April, in Dili, Manuel Carrascalao, 18, student, Manuel Pinto, 50, from Bahu village, Baucau sub-district, Carmelinda Guterres, 89, Marcelina Carrascalao were killed.³⁰ The killings occurred after a rally for pro-autonomy sympathisers that had been organised by the Dili based Aitarak militia, led by Eurico Guterres.

The 17 April pro-autonomy rally began at 10 am outside the front of the East Timor Governor's office where ceremonies were staged for a number of militia groups which had come to Dili from different areas. These groups included Halilintar (Atabe), Dadurus (Maliana), AHI (Aileu), Ablai (Same), Mahidin (Ainaro), Laksaur Merah Putih (Suai), Besi Merah Putih (Maubara), Makikit (Viqueque), Saka (Bacau), Jati Merah Putih (Lospalos). Also in attendance were the military and military commander, police representatives, the Governor and pro-autonomy civilians. In the morning Members of ABRI (Indonesian Armed Forces) forcibly woke local civilians, including old people and transmigrants, in order for them to attend the ceremonial part of the rally.

Joao da Silva Tavares (Pro-Integration War Commander) delivered the first speech. Eurico

³⁰ ETHRC UA 399

Guterres, in his emotional speech to the militia, shouted "I order all militias of pro-integration to clean up the traitors of integration, arrest and kill them.... I, Eurico Guterres will be responsible."

At the finish of the ceremonial part of the rally the militias moved off in different directions, some towards Kolmera and others on to the East Timor University campus (UNTIM). One group passed by the CNRT office where shots were fired into the air. Vehicles belonging to the militia stopped outside the house of Herman das Dores (killed by the military in Manatuto in 1998) and set about to burn the house down. Two cars belonging to his family were also burned.

An ETHRC source has reported further details of the brutal shootings and attacks at the home of Manuel Viegas Carrascalao, a leading figure in GRPRTT (reconciliation movement) and CNRT. Manuel (Manuelito) Carrascalao, son of Manuel Viegas Carrascalao, 18, member of Humanity Volunteers Team, Tim relawan Kemanusiaan, was brutally killed by militia. He was shot in the left temple and the bullet went through to the back of his head. Twice two militiamen stabbed Manuel in the stomach. One used a samurai sword and the other a smaller sword. Each time, the swords penetrated through to Manuel's back.³¹ He was stabbed from the back, which followed through to his left shoulder. It was reported that he died instantly. The dead body was not able to be located at first but after requests were made by Bishop Belo and Manuel's family members to Colonel Tono Suratman, Manuel's body was returned by the police. He was buried in the garden of his brother, Jose Manuel in Comoro. The police prevented the family from burying him at the public cemetery of Santa Cruz because the militia was in control of the cemetery. Carmelinda Guterres aged 89, the great aunty of Manuel, is believed to have been killed during the attack on the house. His cousin, Marcelina Carrascalao, is also believed to have been killed. Neither of the bodies have been seen and therefore confirmation is still being sought.

A militia group that had moved on to Becora after the rally passed by the Taibesi military company (745). At Becora civilians were brutally shot at and houses burned. Manuel Pinto, 50, from the village of Bahu, Baucau District was shot by bullets when he stepped off the bus from Baucau at the Becora bus station. He was taken to the Motael Clinic in Dili but later died at 6.15 p.m., on 17 April, after losing a lot of blood. Manuel Pinto's body was returned to his family for burial in April 19. Sebastiao Martins, 21, was also shot and sustained severe injuries to both legs. He later received medical treatment. Also at the bus station, 16 kiosks were burned, 2 motor bikes stolen, a mini-bus burned, 2 karaoke machines and a video player were taken away. Goods that were being sold there were taken away by the militia. It was also reported that approximately $6,300 (Aus), belonging to Mateus (no surname) was stolen.³² Several others were also injured in the attacks, see case 1.2.4 on attempted extrajudicial execution.

Joao Soares Ximenes, Agricultural student, and Bernardino Simao, Public Sciences student, were kidnapped by Laksur Merah Putih, lead by Olivio Mendonca and then handed over to Mahidin, led by Cancio Lopes de Carvalho, on 9 April. The ETHRC has received reports that the students were killed on 12 April 1999 after their abduction. ETHRC sources indicate that both youths were killed at Duluquede (cemetery), near the BTT post, Uebaba hamlet, Cassa village. The students were on their way back from the Public Health Centre in Suai where they were to start their social work. It is believed they were targeted for their political activities on the UNTIM campus.³³

The BTT 143 and KORAMIL members shot into the air at the same time. Many other unidentified villagers are thought to have been injured in the incident. On 15 February in events leading up to the attack, several villagers were detained and beaten (see case 2.1.11).

Shortly after the attack on Guico village, on 3 March 1999, Narcisio da Silva, 30, farmer, from Mauno Rt. 01 hamlet, Guico village, was shot by members of the Indonesian Armed Forces who were dressed in full combat gear. When the police support arrived they made no arrests. According to an unconfirmed UN report on the incident four senior Indonesian army sergeants and Lieutenant Satrisno were implicated in the incident. Lt. Satrisno, when confronted with the allegations responded with "If I was involved everyone would have been killed."⁴¹ The ETHRC is still investigating the identity of the East Timorese civilians injured and their current condition.

Cases 1.2.8 - 1.2.14 see Appendix A.

2. Violations of the Right to Individual Liberty

During 1998 the ETHRC received reports of 256 violations of the Right to Individual Liberty. In the first six months of 1999 there were 268 violations of right to liberty including 201 cases of arbitrary detention and 67 cases of disappearances. During this period a pattern of enforced disappearances leading to a confirmation of extrajudicial execution is frequent. Although many times this pattern is indeed confirmed, the ETHRC does not consider a civilian to be a victim of execution although they disappeared and are presumed dead by locals. Some of the information obtained alleges that the "disappeared" people were in fact killed, but these reports are very difficult to confirm and are only reported as extrajudicial executions when there is confirmation.

The vast majority of allegations have not been investigated, the perpetrators have not been charged or punished, and the Indonesian Military and the militias they support continue to enjoy impunity for human rights violations against East Timorese people.

2.1 Arbitrary Detention

The perpetrators of arbitrary detention in East Timor include the members of military backed militia in addition to the police and military. The practice is frequent in East Timor. The detentions documented here are in violation of widely accepted international standards. Article 9 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights prohibits arbitrary arrest and detention, as well as Article 9 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which states: "No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest or detention. No one shall be deprived of his liberty except on such grounds and in accordance with such procedure as are established by law.” The cases documented also exhibit Indonesia’s failure to abide by its criminal procedure code (KUHAP), therefore violating the East Timorese rights under Indonesian and international law. In the first six months of 1999, civilians were arrested without the required warrants,⁴² and they were often arrested by the military or civilian militia, rather than by police, as required under Indonesian law.⁴³

Case 2.1.1

On 2 January 1999 KORAMIL 03 Maubara members arrested several youths in Vaviquinia village. The following individual was alleged to be arrested: Maucuru (no surname), 29, from Vaviquinia village. Lauhata and Maumeta officials arrived with police who arrested the driver and conductor because the perpetrators could not be found. The village officials found the victim, one of the perpetrators and Paulino, a witness, on orders of the police and brought them to a Lauhata village office. Subsequently, the perpetrator Reinato (no surname) escaped. However, the village officials brought Paulino de Carvalho to POLRES Liquica. The police at POLRES are apparently treating Paulino as though he was the perpetrator and are keeping him in custody. 2.2 Enforced Disappearances

In 1998, the ETHRC received reports of 21 East Timorese who disappeared. This figure has increased to 67, in just the first half of 1999.⁴⁴ Indonesia is obligated as a UN member to abide by the general principles under Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights which grants everyone the right to "liberty and security of person," as well as being bound by Article 9 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which states that "No one shall be deprived of his liberty except on such grounds and in accordance with such procedure as are established by law."

Lack of security in East Timor for human rights organisations makes it difficult to obtain information about the progress of cases. People reported as "disappeared" have often been arbitrarily detained at unknown locations, or were seen being abducted by unidentified individuals. However, those who are never located are likely to have been killed, or to have gone into hiding over fear of further persecution or death.

On 10 January 1999, 4:00 p.m., Carlito de Araujo, 30, from Una-Ana-Uco village, Venilale sub-district, Ossoguigui hamlet, Baucau district, was abducted and has been

The victim was on his way to his parents-in-law house only 100 metres from his home when a group of armed men, believed to be ABRI members dressed in civilian clothes, surrounded Carlito de Araujo and beat him with a rifle butt, and bound him by his hands and feet. He was then carried off in the direction of Kaibulori. They reached the river at 6:00 p.m. where witnesses heard Carlito de Araujo cry out as a result of the beatings, however, nobody came to his aid because the witness thought the group of abductors to be ABRI members. The locals believe that he has been killed. The current location and condition of Carlito de Araujo is unknown.

On 27 January Jose Soares and Joao Cardoso were detained and tortured by members of the Mahidin group who were also responsible for the death of Fernando Cardoso (see case 1.1.3). Jose Soares was beaten on the spot and then taken to Casa village, Ainaro sub-district. Jose Soares has been missing ever since this incident. Case 2.2.6

On 10 May 1999, in a separate incident the following eight people, seven of which are female and three of which are believed to be children, were taken from their home in the Santa Cruz District of Dili: Cesaltina (no surname), Olandina Maria Caetano, Elda Maria Caetano, Lita (no surname), Julia (no surname), Zelia Guterres, Maria Julia Guterres, and Afonso Guterres. Case 2.2.9

The ETHRC is concerned for the safety of nine East Timorese civilians who were captured by members of the military-backed militia between 17 and 18 May, following an operation in the sub-district of Bazartete, west of the capital Dili. Cases 2.2.11 – 2.2.16 see Appendix A.

3. Violations of the Right to Integrity and Security of Person

Torture, rape and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, whether physical or mental are human rights violations which are clearly stated in Article 1 of the United Nation's Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (Torture Convention). Indonesia has signed and ratified the Torture Convention making the government bound by the principles set forth within it. The ETHRC therefore reports all violations of Article 1 of the Torture Convention in this section.⁴⁶

In East Timor, there is a trend of impunity for the perpetrators of the Torture Convention, as allegations are generally not investigated by the Indonesian authorities and perpetrators are not brought to justice. Regardless of the security situation in East Timor,⁴⁷ and regardless of whether the perpetrators are Indonesian officials or militias⁴⁸ sponsored by the Indonesian government, Indonesia must still prevent all acts of torture, investigate the crimes, and bring to justice all perpetrators under the Torture Convention. An overview of this section will clearly show that Indonesia has also failed to uphold accepted international standards in respect of treatment of prisoners in detention, to which Indonesia has subscribed.⁴⁹

In the first half of 1999, 220 East Timorese were subjected to torture perpetrated by the militias, and the Indonesian military forces, usually as retribution for being connected with the independence movement.

The ETHRC also received reports of 17 East Timorese civilians who were subjected to rape and sexual abuse. These violations generally occurred in police, military, and militia posts, but there are also an increasing number of “No exceptional circumstances whatsoever, whether a state of war or a threat of war, internal political instability or any other public emergency, may be invoked as a justification for torture.” Under the Convention Indonesia must also “take effective legislative, administrative, judicial or other measures to prevent acts of torture in any territory under its jurisdiction.” Article 2(1).

⁴⁷ Article 2(2) of the Torture Convention states that

He was on his way home from visiting his parents for a New Year's celebration when Mahidin members stopped the mikrolet, dragged him from the vehicle and tied his hands and feet together with a piece of rope. They proceeded to beat him with their shoes, fists, and rifle butts on his face, chest, and stomach. He was repeatedly beaten that morning until he had difficulty breathing because of the pain in his chest and lungs. The initial torture lasted from 10:30 am until 6:00 p.m. when the Mahidin stopped the brutalisation because they were tired. They then blindfolded Carlito and threw him into the truck of the Mahidin Commander, Cancio de Carvalho. After driving around Casa village several times the Mahidin members let Carlito out near the bank of the Sarai River, where subsequently he was tortured again in a hut near the river. He was beaten until blood was flowing out of his nose and mouth which he swallowed for strength. The torture continued until about 4:00, January 3 when Carlito went unconscious. He regained his consciousness at about 6:00 am, in the river, and his hands and feet were still bound. The Mahidin members then dragged Carlito from the river and began to try to pressure him into joining the militia. They offered 250,000 rupiah monthly as compensation, however, Carlito refused. Carlito was subsequently locked up by the head of the village, brother of Cancio de Carvalho, and militia for one week. During detention he was continually brutalised and intimidated and was only fed food resembling bird food. His wife pleaded to Indonesian security forces who refused to come to Carlito's aid or do anything else about the situation. His wife was able to visit him only three times while in detention.

Case 3.1.4

On 26 January 1999, there were two cases of torture in the Maubara sub-district. Members of KORAMIL 03 Maubara entitled Serda Abilio forced Vaviquinia villagers to go to KORAMIL 03 Headquarters. Also, on 26 January 1999, in a separate incident in Maubaralisa, civilians were forced to go to KORAMIL 03 Headquarters in an effort to force them into joining Ratih. The following individuals all experienced similar treatment by the perpetrators. They were initially beaten then brought to the local police station, or army post, then moved to the Hera police headquarters. At all stages of detention they were beaten, sometimes with rifle butts. Cases 3.1.18 – 3.1.37 see Appendix A

3.2 Rape and Sexual Abuse

In the period covered by this report, the ETHRC received 3 reports of East Timorese women being raped and 14 cases of other types of sexual abuse perpetrated by the Indonesian military and militias they support. Rape is much more widespread than the small number of cases documented would indicate. This is because information about rape is particularly difficult to obtain as East Timorese women are reluctant to speak about their experiences of being raped. Women will typically not report the abuse, nor seek medical treatment because they are ashamed and fear they will only receive more abuse upon reporting the incident.⁵³

Case 3.2.1

Maria Fatima, 29, home-maker from Maubaralisa village, Maubara sub-district, Liquica District was raped on 11 February 1999, around 12:00 p.m. by Mariano Lacubau, a member of the Besi Merah Putih. At around 11:45, Mariano came to Maria Fatima's home asking where her husband was, and then asking for water. When she left her room to get some water for Mariano, she discovered that he had already broken into her home and was right outside the entrance to her room. After drinking the water, Mariano Lacubau tried to force Maria Fatima onto the divan, and only after the victim repeatedly screamed for her husband, did Mariano Lacubau stop the attack and go away.

⁵³ See generally Miranda E. Sissons, From One Day to Another: Violations of Women's Reproductive and Sexual Rights in East Timor (East Timor Human Rights Centre, 1997).

About five minutes later Mariano Lacubau returned half-naked with his trousers down wielding a machete. He threatened Maria Fatima with death if she screamed. Mariano then proceeded to rape Maria Fatima. Her underwear was ripped off by Mariano Lacubau, who raped Maria Fatima while she was standing.

Her husband, Cesario, returned and insisted that the rape be reported to the head of the Besi Merah Putih, Jose Dasi, 50 from Maubara. They reported the rape and Jose Dasi promised the problem would be resolved. Jose Dasi summoned Maria Fatima and her husband Cesario to the Besi Merah Putih post on 12 February 1999. Upon arrival Maria Fatima and her husband Cesario were attacked and tortured by members of the Besi Merah Putih. The two victims were subjected to torture using sharp weapons, such as machetes and iron bars. The ears and mouth of Cesario were bleeding heavily as a result of the attack. The following were the perpetrators of the attack: Mariano Locubau, the rapist, from Maubaralisa village; Domingas, wife of Mariano Locubau from Maubaralisa village; Olandino Locubau, father of the rapist from Maubaralisa; Domingos Goncalves, from Vaviquinia village; Fernando Sousa from Maubaralisa; Denis (no surname), from Maubaralisa; Fernando (no surname) from Vaviquinia; Berdnado (Maunado) from Maubaralisa; Germando (no surname) from Maubaralisa; Maulino (no surname) from Maubaralisa; Roke (no surname) from Maubaralisa; Paul (no surname) from Maubaralisa.

Marta Fatima, Ivonia Ribeiro, Virginia Sarmiento, Ermelinda da Conceicao, Genoveva (no surname), Agusta (no surname), Justina Santa, Etelvina Ribeiro, Gracilda Varela, and Teresa Varela were arrested between 17 and 18 May because their husbands were accused of joining the East Timorese resistance movement after the 5-6 April 1999 Liquica Massacre (see case 1.1.14).⁵⁴ Anita Lemos and Elvira (no surname) were arrested on 31 May 1999 at Ulmera village. It is believed that the head of the village of Ulmera, Paustino (no surname) gave orders to arrest the women.

According to reliable ETHRC sources, the twelve women have been detained and subject to continued forced labour from the Indonesian Armed Forces backed militia group entitled Besi Merah Putih (BMP). Amnesty International has also been informed that the women have apparently been subject to sexual abuse. All twelve women were held hostage at the houses of two teachers, Geraldo Ribeiro and Manuel Soares, who are brothers. The ETHRC also received unconfirmed reports of the women's 24 children were also being held hostage. The BMP stated that the women had to present their husbands to the BMP by 4 June 1999, or they would be killed. According to recent reports, all 12 women were released from custody in June 1999.

Marcelina Corte Real, 20, and Rosa da Costa, 19, were subject to an attempted rape by members of the militias and ABRI on 14 April 1999 in Tilomar subdistrict, Covalima. Olivio Mendonca, a local militia commander arrived during the attempted rape and stopped the perpetrators.

Case 3.2.4

⁵⁴ ETHRC UA 7/99

home then raped and beaten by 15 men. The men put a gun in her mouth and beat her. The men included 10 members of the BMP militia and 5 members of the Indonesian army, including a commander named C. Lucas.

Case 3.2.5

On 27 June 1999, Mrs. Mar, 42, was raped by Victor Pedroso Borges, a primary school teacher and commander of Darah Merah Integrasi militia. Her husband has been in hiding in Dili.

3.3 Systematic Destruction of Property and Persecution

There is a consistent trend of systematic destruction of houses and other property of the East Timorese. The attacks on homes follow a similar pattern in which the individuals and families are in the houses when the attack begins and personal attacks on the people and destruction of property then follows. These attacks then lead to an increasing number of Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) because the residents have nowhere to live, and no personal property from which to earn a living. As a UN Charter member, Indonesia must abide by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, including article 17 which states "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property." Article 25 of the UDHR also obligates Indonesia to ensure "everyone has a right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and his family." Although the problem of destruction of property accompanied by persecution is serious, the documented cases are only listed in Appendix C: Property Destruction. The victims of property destruction listed in the appendix had their homes destroyed. The number of documented cases is only a minimal portion of the estimated cases perpetrated. The majority of those documented in the property Appendix C were accompanied by other reported human rights violations documented in other sections of this report.

4. Violations of the Right to Due Process

4.1 Breaches of Procedural Guarantees

East Timorese are frequently denied their right to due process during arrest as well as after arrest. Under Article 18 of KUHAP, there are several procedural guarantees that have been ignored in East Timor. First, the sole responsibility for arrest and detention of criminals is given to police. Second, suspects must be provided a warrant for arrest within 24 hours of arrest, unless they are caught in the act of the crime. Also, duress may not be used to obtain information under article 17 of KUHAP. The Indonesian military, police and militias they back have broken these procedural guarantees in a substantial number of documented cases detailed in this report.

International standards require that "No one shall be deprived of his liberty except on such grounds and in accordance with such procedure as are established by law."⁵⁵ In the majority of documented cases, the Indonesian army and the militias they support do not abide by the Indonesian Criminal Procedure Code. Because procedural guarantees are broken in nearly all other cases documented in this report, they are not separately documented in this section.

5. Violations of Freedom of Expression and Association

In the first half of 1999, the Indonesian military and the militias they support have conducted a number of operations involving the arbitrary arrest and detention of civilians suspected of being supporters of independence. In each case the motivation for these arrests has been political. The military and militias have tried to forcefully discourage East Timor's independence, and to crack down on those suspected of involvement in the independence movement. This trend is seen in the latest wave of persecution and intimidation of civilians, especially in Maliana, Suai and Liquica.

As a UN member, Indonesia must uphold basic human rights principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). Under the UDHR, "Everyone has the right of freedom of peaceful assembly and association."⁵⁶

The violations of freedom of expression and association have not been documented separately as the cases also involve executions, torture, arbitrary detention and other violations. Many of the arbitrary detentions, tortures, and executions that are documented occur because the victims are suspected of being supporters of independence.

6. Unreported Cases - 1998

6.1 Extrajudicial Execution

Case 6.1.1

Romeo Atisuri, 22, from Bilimau, Miligo village, a married farmer, was killed on 12 December 1998. He was killed by Joao Tavares, with members of SGI, BTT, and Halilintar, including Feliciano Maubere, and Francisco Viegas. He was initially arrested by the SGI, BTT, and Halilintar on 10 December 1998 at 9:30 am in Gaulolo village, Sumiuba hamlet for being a suspected supporter of Falintil. He was forcefully brought to the forest to find the whereabouts of the Falintil. He was tied and tortured on the journey and until his death on 12 December 1998 at Nunudoe hamlet, between Atudare village and Meligo Atas.

6.2 Torture

On 27 December 1998 the people of Maubara sub-district were terrorised and intimidated by members of the Gardapaksi assisted by the KORAMIL 03 Maubara and BTT 143. On 27 December 1998, Lucas Maria dos Santos, Agosto Nunes, 26, Domingos Fontes, 22, Saturnino Alves, 19 were allegedly detained, tortured and subsequently released by the groups named above. About four hours afterward about 40 members of the Gardapaksi protected by BTT 143 went from house to house in Vatuboro village threatening inhabitants, and attacking and burning houses.
